NEWS UPDATE

A Resilient Life

Resilience doesn't stem from having fewer problems; resilient people often face significant challenges. What defines them is their ability to confront adversity and grow from it. They understand setbacks are part of life and tackle difficulties with strength, learning from each experience.

Adaptability is crucial—they shift approaches and find new solutions when things don't go as planned. Emotional regulation is also key. Resilient individuals manage negative emotions effectively, ensuring they don't hinder progress.

Strong relationships provide essential support, reminding us that no one is resilient alone. These connections offer encouragement during tough times. Optimism and hope further drive resilience, helping people believe in better outcomes and persevere through adversity.

Resilience is not an inherent trait but a skill developed over time, built through experience, emotional strength, and support from others. It's about growing stronger by facing, not avoiding, challenges.

As the Bible reminds us, "We can rejoice, too, when we run into problems and trials, for we know that they help us develop endurance" (Romans 5:3).

TF Eagle,
The holidays are a special time to express our appreciation and gratitude for the many blessings in our lives.

This Thanksgiving Day, I encourage each of you to remember your fellow service members who are separated from their families due to deployment, including those involved in Operation Lone Star.

Let's also keep in mind those who must work through this holiday weekend to fulfill important State tasks. Their dedication ensures that critical operations continue, even during the holiday season.

As we gather around our dinner tables this Thanksgiving, let's reflect on the many things we are thankful for in this great country of ours. I am especially thankful for the men and women who have chosen to serve, making significant sacrifices for the well-being of others.

I truly appreciate your commitment and everything you do for our communities, state, and our country.

Wishing you all a safe and Happy Thanksgiving!
