Reducing Anxiety In Your Life – pt.2 of 3
Last week, I mentioned one thing you can do to address and manage the anxiety in your life is to acknowledge the source of your anxiety. Here is the second thing you can do:
Reduce unconscious sources of anxiety. Some of the biggest culprits of anxiety are too much caffeine, information and choices. All of these individually stimulate the brain and body and when taken in large or ongoing quantities can make us feel edgy, overwhelmed, impatient and anxious. I have a friend who lived with immense aggravation and he was not aware that his 8 Mountain Dew's a day were contributing to any of it! Likewise, we love our choices and being connected, but research continues to show that our lives feel more satisfying and manageable when we choose to put limits on our choices and the information flowing to and from us. Peace to you, Ch McKay
