CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

I am told there is no plot without conflict, and the same must be true for my own narrative. Growth is not possible apart from honest struggle and heartrending hardship, but the difference made by the cradle and the cross is that Christ enters the foray with us. He doesn't fight the battles for us while we look on from a distance, but instead faces the enemy side-by-side with us to the extent that he sways the outcome in our favor. We are more than conquerors because he is in us and that always adds up to superior force. I will never slay my demons on my own; fortunately, I don't have to.

Questions to Consider:

1. Pause, as long as it takes, and identify your inner demons. Now, list them in the order of their damaging impact.
2. Admit and lay these "demons" before the Lord and request His help in overcoming. In addition, who might you ask to help you and hold yourself accountable for dealing with them?
